

Content Hacker and Creative Writer

Project Title	Content Hacker and Creative Writer
Project Summary	Build and synthesize documents and communications related to employee engagement and culture. Interview NASA employee focus groups, research existing documentation, and provide written insight for easy digest. Present new products to senior leadership. Draft Agency wide workforce communications.
Country	United States

Project Description

This internship will continue this important work within the Office of Chief Human Capital Officer as it relates to leadership development and workforce culture. The internship will consist of a number of small special projects and work that will change throughout the year as many important initiatives come up. This is a great opportunity to understand the variety and breadth of work within human capital as it relates to an organization's culture.

New focus area on executive development: a portion of this internship will specifically be set aside to support our continued work in executive development, including the update of an external training catalog targeted at our most senior executives.

Additional Information

NASA is the #1 place to work in the Federal Government for 8 straight years. Our agency has continued to be the front runner in employee engagement, innovation, and collaboration. We continue to build a great working environment because of our dedication to understanding, listening, and developing our workforce.

Must have an interest in benefiting humankind! The ability to effectively collaborate with various teams, providing the most useful guidance in an enthusiastic and inspiring manner. A sparkling personality that will mesh well with the existing NASA family and a smile on their face a majority of the time. Experience working with designers, developers, and team focused creative process.

Previous Example Work:

Content Hacker and Creative Writer will read/become familiar with agency supporting documents and interview selected focus groups in order to determine content that is most important to be included in the New Employee Handbook (no more that 15 pages front and back). They are responsible for creating the content and the visual graphics to support it (NASA has a graphic department that can support this effort if graphic support is needed). They will work independently and manage their own time/work flow with weekly tag-ups with a POC from the NASA Office of the Chief Human Capital Officer (OCHCO). A finalized document is due before the end of their time as an intern and a presentation of the product is given to OCHCO leadership.
